1. The objective of the present application is to provide a waveguide to microstrip transition ("waveguide coupling device") in which the emergence of interference radiation is effectively suppressed in a simple manner and which may be manufactured with little effort. This is basically achieved by the provision of two slots at opposite sides of the nodal plane of a longitudinal mode component such that fields emerging from the slots cancel each other in the radiation zone. The International Search Report cites three documents rated "A" all pertaining to antennas consisting of slotted waveguides. Patent document US-A-4513291 discloses in particular in figures 1a and 2 waveguides of the type referred to in claim 1 with slits (1, 5) at different sides of a nodal plane. However, the radiation emerging from these slits does not cancel and the document does not contain any incitement thereto. The same observation holds mutatis mutandis for patent document US-A-5831583 in respect of slots 14 and 15. In patent document US-A-5173714 slots of different orientation are used and moreover no cancellation is accomplished. The subject matter of the claims is accordingly novel and not rendered obvious by the cited prior art.
